A presentation on the project will be conducted at the White River NWR visitor center prior to undertaking a tour of the refuge. Field Trip Option 2: Rixey Bayou Wetlands Mitigation Area and Fourche Creek Watershed Restoration Project/Little Rock Audubon Nature Center The 235-acre Rixey Bayou wetlands mitigation area was developed in the early 1990s by Arkansas HTD to mitigate unavoidable wetlands impacts associated with the construction of the Northbelt Freeway and future projects in the Central Arkansas area. Just minutes from The Peabody Hotel, the Rixey Bayou tour will focus on the selection of this property by AHTD as a mitigation area, wetland creation and enhancement, ongoing maintenance, wildlife habitat protection and creation, and wildlife crossings and connectivity. The second leg of the field trip will focus on Audubon Arkansas and its efforts to protect and restore one of the nation's largest urban wetlands: Fourche Creek. Fourche Creek drains 108,000 acres of Little Rock and surrounding areas. Its meandering channel braids and connects numerous wetlands, the largest being more than 2,500 acres. Audubon Arkansas is working in partnership with the City of Little Rock to develop the Little Rock Audubon Center in Southeast Little Rock. The center will serve the greater Little Rock area, with a targeted educational focus on children attending the 50 schools within 15 minutes of the site. Acreage surrounding the center includes both the city-owned Fourche Creek wetlands and the unique soils and plants of

The 2,000 acres available for use by the center offer a vast and richly diverse "lab" for young people to learn about conservation, restoration, wildlife and plants. Trails designed for a variety of learning experiences will surround the Center. Fourche Creek drains the majority of Little Rock's surface water and storm water. During typical storm events, Fourche Creek's wetlands can store nearly 1 billion gallons of water. Its ecological functions include water purification, containment and storage of floodwaters, urban noise reduction, and wildlife habitat accommodation. Because hundreds of acres of the Fourche Creek wetlands are owned by the City of Little Rock and managed by Audubon Arkansas and the City Parks and Recreation Department, the potential for recreational use as a vast urban park is tremendous.
